“Honor” Killing

“Honor” killing is a “homicide of a member of a family or social group by other members, due to the belief of the perpetrators that the victim has brought dishonor upon the family or community,” according to Wikipedia.

Human rights activists have repeatedly emphasized that victims are often women wanting to marry of their own will, leading to possible loss of property.

In 2011, human rights groups reported 720 honor killings in Pakistan, 605 women and 115 men.

In Pakistan, honor killings are known as karo-kari and have come to be used with regard to multiple forms of “immoral behavior” including marital infidelity, refusal to submit to an arranged marriage, rape, demanding a divorce, or perceived flirtatious behavior. They are frequently more complicated than the stated excuses of the perpetrators. More often than not, the murder relates to inheritance problems, feud-settling, or a desire to get rid of the wife.

Such killings are so entrenched in the social, political and economic fabric of Pakistan that the government, for the most part, ignores the daily instances of women being killed and maimed by their families. Human rights organizations continue the fight to end this practice, but even recent legislation has been mostly ineffective in punishing the perpetrators of these violent acts.

Our speaker for the May meeting is Jacqueline St. Joan, author of My Sisters Made of Light, a novel about honor killings in Pakistan. In the novel, the author uses her extensive travels and research in Pakistan—as well as her own experiences as a human rights activist, lawyer, and judge—to share with readers a compelling, heartbreaking, and sometimes terrifying look into the lives of women and men in the social, political, and religious maze that is Pakistan.

The novel centers on activist sisters who dedicate themselves to helping the women of Pakistan. It also introduces Western readers to Pakistan’s myriad cultures—from the mystical Sindhis in the South to the noble Pathans in the Northwest Province, the Punjabis in the East and the Balochis of the West.

Ujala, a teacher-trainer, travels throughout her country trying to unravel the strands of violence that are braided into Pakistani life, most notably “honor crimes” which engender pain and hopelessness in both their direct victims, as well as enabling social control of the broader female population. Along the way she enlists her sisters, her brother, her father, her

Service

The Service Committee loves to spend your money and as you all approved at our dinner meeting we were pleased to send $280.00 to Smart-Girl to fund a scholarship for their 2013 Summer Leadership Camp.

Remember to review the opportunities to serve with our most recent grant recipients and of course any of our past recipients are always glad to receive any help you may be able to give.

The time approaches when the new board members and committees take on their new responsibilities and challenges and I wish them a fun year ahead. So I would like to take this opportunity to tell all who will listen that the Service Committee "rocks". If I could I would give them all a Zonta rock. All these ladies have a passion for service and I want to thank them for all their hard work this past year and I know that it will continue on into the future and make a difference in many lives. So my Zonta rock is presented with gratitude to Evie, Jeanette, Liz, Nancy and Sue K. Thanks for a great year!

Taking Service to the Next Level-- A Team Approach

A few facts have recently converged for me, and I'm interested in hearing what you think.

1. Our partnership with Metro's International Women's Studies and Services (IWSS) department has been bubbling under the surface for a couple of years, with their sponsorship of the film event.
2. In between a full load of classes, our current scholarship student, Jennine Jeffries, works at IWSS and teaches scholarship essay workshops. She is also the president of the Iota Iota Iota Honor Society (the honor society for women's studies).
3. In addition to speaking at the Area 3 meeting, Jennine, through Triota, sponsored us at Metro for the (free!) Area 3 meeting space. Triota wants to increase their hands-on service activities around women's issues and is hoping to partner with ZCD as we develop service projects with our grantees.

Where could this go?

We can continue to encourage film event sponsorship from IWSS, and generate a benefit for them, too, in activities that help teach their students about real-life women's issues in Denver. I'm not looking to add tasks to our list, so how can we do this within Zonta's existing structure?

What if we continue to develop specific service projects with our grantees, and invite Triota and IWSS to serve with us? That would enable us to:

- provide needed services to our grantees
- bring more energy into our offer of service to our grantees
- strengthen our partnership with Metro and IWSS
- introduce new generations of women to Zonta's mission and the tradition of service
- increase the general visibility and credibility of Zonta and ZCD in the community

I'm hoping these ideas, in some fashion, can be incorporated into this coming year's Service Committee work.

What do you think?

Mother's Day Ideas

As I'm sure you're aware, May 12 is Mother's Day this year. What's a good Mother's Day gift? A picture frame? A candle? How about a donation to Zonta International that will give a woman in the developing world a chance for personal safety or better health?

The ZISVAW projects can give a monumental gift of safety to women in Rural Samoa, Honduras, Nigeria and Bangladesh.*

Or perhaps a gift of health? Zonta's International Service Programs contribute significantly to the health of women in Liberia and Rwanda.*

Too many choices? Can't decide which gift would be best? Donate to Zonta's Rose Fund and your gift will go where it's needed most.

In any case, when you've decided which gift to give, wrap it up by clicking "donate now" here and give in your mom's name. She'd be proud of you.

ZONTA CLUB OF DENVER EDNA JEAN HERSHEY SCHOLARSHIPS

Zonta Club of Denver Recognized
at Metro State University of Denver
Scholarship Dinner

Several years ago, ZCD set up an endowment at then Metropolitan State College of Denver to provide scholarships to single mother students with financial need. Every three years additional funds are contributed to the endowment from the Hershey Charitable Trust.

I was privileged to represent ZCD at the Metro State University of Denver scholarship dinner on April 10. There were three donors and 7 students (including ZCD's scholarship student) at our table and between the presentations by students and the conversation at the table, we donor representatives heard a lot about the students' studies, challenges and goals. In addition to the inspiration of the students' presentations, comments from MSUD's president stick with me.

Metro State University of Denver president Dr. Stephen Jordan helped us remember why we contribute to scholarships at MSUD. "It's not just the annual chicken dinner," he said, "although, thanks to our new hospitality department, that's pretty darn good. We're here because we're feeding the future, and MSUD is the best educational deal around." ZCD is pretty smart to send our funds where we can get so much return on the investment.

—Wendy

Area 3 Meeting impressions—

We all formed an assembly line and filled donated string backpacks with full-sized shampoo, conditioner, soap, washcloths, deodorant, toothbrushes, and toothpaste for homeless women.

Jeanne Ritter was vivacious, down-to-earth, and able to poke fun at herself. She truly has a passion for mental health.

Our scholarship student, Jennine Jeffries, is a single mother of four, employed at the IWSS Department, and president of Iota, Iota, Iota, the women's studies honors society!

AREA 3 MEETING: VISION, COMMITMENT, TRANSFORMATION.

I was honored to be joined by so many ZCD-ers at the Area 3 meeting on April 13. My friend Cheryl, who facilitated the ice-breaker, got to talk with a few attendees and was very impressed with the caliber of people in our club. I was very proud to be able to say to her that every task that comes up seems to draw at least a couple of Zontians who will step up to take it on, whether or not they have done it before.

It's telling that except for our scholarship student, every speaker at the meeting had not known a lot about Zonta before the meeting, and in their remarks, each said something about how impressed she was with Zonta's mission, goals and activities. It's nice to occasionally consider, through the eyes of a new person, why we belong to Zonta and to remember not to take our organization, our fellow members or ourselves for granted.

The end of the meeting got us all on our feet and out to the atrium for a service project, during which we filled string backpacks with donated toiletries for the homeless women currently being served by the Volunteers of America. Lisa from VOA was there to accept the bags and confessed she was quite overwhelmed by Zonta's service focus and overall mission.

In addition to all the good things that happened during the meeting, one unplanned benefit was that Boulder's Golden Z's attended. As these high school students listened to Jennine Jeffries' presentation, I could see them recognize and connect with her as a fellow young woman who had recently been at the beginning of her adult life, just where they are headed. They were intent as she described how she had made some poor choices and then with some help (and the Zonta scholarship), turned herself around and found her true path. Watching those young women hear life lessons from a slightly more experienced young woman was sheer magic. Neither Jennine nor we may ever know what kind of impact that twenty minutes at one meeting on a Saturday morning might have for any of those five young women.

Julie B will be sending the speakers' presentations for posting to the ZCD, Area 3 and District 12 websites in case you'd like to see them.

They include some great information about non-profit PR basics, District 12 news, International project progress and the "Zonta Says No" campaign.

I am so grateful to Julie B and Mary Lou for stepping up and planning and putting on the meeting, and I know Area 3 Director Debbie Squires is, too. Our flexibility muscles really got a workout. The venue changed, the focus changed, the speakers changed, and we went with it. There were multiple adjustments to the flyer, the marketing, and the agenda, and we took it in stride. On meeting day, we had timing and logistics issues with signs, speakers, presentations and food and we fine-tuned as needed. We're Zontians. We made it work.

In hindsight, I probably should have corralled a few people prior to the meeting to help with logistics on the day, but in spite of me, as each thing needed attention, a ZCD-er stepped up and filled the gap.

The Area 3 meeting reminded me once again: Zonta Rocks!

President's Message

President Wendy

“This year, there have been moments of confusion (many), clarity (few), and gratitude (constant). ”

We're in the process of wrapping up another Zonta year and beginning again. Here are a few notes to consider as we plunge in, about committee selections for 2013 – 2014; upcoming service projects; and the end of my first term as president.

Committees

At the April dinner meeting, people looked over the 2012 - 2013 committee chart to see where they might want to direct their time and talents this coming year. Please help me with the committee assignment task and fill out the preference sheet that will be emailed with this issue or just send Mary B or me an email with “ZCD committee preferences” in the subject line. Make sure to put down a few choices in order of preference, since we still have about 55 committee slots and 40 members to fill them. With five major committees and several smaller groups, members should be able to choose one large committee and one or two smaller ones and not overtax their schedules. (Note that the committee preference sheet only lists the standing (major) committees; check out the special (smaller) committees on pages 2 and 3 of the club directory.) If you'd like to broaden your horizons, this is a good way to enjoy more than one kind of experience with Zonta.

Service

As we move into the spring (barring another snowstorm), I look forward to seeing the service projects that are developed with our 2013 grantees. Just as we sign up for Delores, film event and yard sale tasks on the clipboard, we'll be developing specific projects with the other 2013 grantees to add to that same clipboard. No need to create a new process, since this one works pretty well. I know we all want to give with our hands and hearts as well as our fundraising efforts.

Elections

When I consider my presidency this year, I find there have been moments of confusion (many), clarity (few), and gratitude (constant). I have been so grateful for your direction and help at every turn, whether it was at committee, Board, trustees' or dinner meetings, or the occasional "you may have forgotten this" phone call. And now, in spite of my shortcomings, you have elected me to another term as president. Are you sure about this? Well, you're stuck with me now.

Silliness aside for the moment, I look forward to this coming year, and the opportunity to work with some tried and true Board members and some new volunteers. I know my gratitude will only increase, and I hope to have a different balance of clarity and confusion, but I can't guarantee any fewer silly moments at the podium. I'll thank you in advance for your patience and we'll make it work.
